SCIEPRO/Science Photo library/Getty Images According to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, Venus' surface temperature appears to range from about 820 to nearly 900 degrees Fahrenheit. It's hot enough to melt the lead. Venus is the second closest planet to the Sun. That's about 67 million miles from Earth. Venus looks like the brightest planet because of the way its clouds reflect sunlight. It was once thought that Venus might support life similar to Earth's. However, Venus is inhospitable to life forms because they exist here. The atmosphere is mostly carbon dioxide and contains only a trace of the amount of water. The atmosphere of Venus also traps the heat of the sun, causing its scorching surface temperature. The probes sent to Venus survived for only a few hours before being destroyed by this heat. Sun signs are the most popular form of astrology that you are probably already familiar with. Determined by the position of the sun, it is easy to find out what your sun sign is, knowing what month you were born as a calendar year based on the position of the sun. But the night sky is full of many other stars and planets! Paying attention to different stars can give you a more detailed astrological reading. When it comes to romance and love compatibility, looking at your Venus sign can be more revealing. To determine your sign of Venus, you need to know where Venus was located the night you were born. As you know, there are constellations in the sky corresponding to 12 signs of the zodiac. Find out in which constellation Venus was located in or near on your birthday and it will be your sign of Venus. There are many Venus sign charts to help you figure out your Venus sign depending on your birthday. Being Venus in Aries doesn't mean your sign of the Sun is Aries. Again, the signs of the Sun and other signs of the star are different things. If you were born when Venus was located in the constellation Aries, you are Venus in Aries. Here are some general tips and tips for Aris in Love. When Venus is in Aries, love begins again with spring. Easily excited by the prospect of new love, you are always looking for ways to revive the novel in a long time affair. Or, at the risk of starting something new is never just around your mind. Venus in cardinal fire means that you are always pulsating with new life and the energy of spring. You will pursue a love interest with shocking abandon, and in extreme cases, this zeal leads you to fly at night marriages. Your impulsiveness sometimes gets into trouble because you lose interest just as quickly. You value your independence, and you will never do or say anything for the sake of a relationship. Yes, you may be selfish, but this self concentration is what makes you so awesome. You don't like anything too settled, preferring some tension in the relationship. It's crazy for let's all get along types. But for you, and mental sparring get blood pumping. You'll run from partner or bond that gets into a routine. The bottom line, Venus in Aries men and Venus in Aries women, both need challenge and constant creativity. You like to be the top dog of any clique, and pull it out by being generous, exciting and just so darn self-confidence. Your thirst for life is contagious, but not everyone can live at your pace. Others respect you because you remain true to yourself no matter what. You are generous, but you can demand the time and attention of others. You're stupid, which means you won't lie and tell your friends that they look good all the time. Your friends are counting on you to tell you how it is! You admire strong, independent types, and seem to be satisfied around self-pity and insecurity. Venus in Aries is a supporter of tough love. This is tricky because any pre-planning should be thrown out the window during a wild ride with Venus in Aries. You want people to be real, not to play games. You want people to be straight and not say things they don't mean. You like to lead in a relationship, but also crave dynamism in a partner. Your ideal partner inflames your own passions and stays interested in your own life. Venus in Aries is a good pair with the other Venus in Aries, but here's a look at compatibility with other signs of Venus. With Venus in the first sign of fire, love is urgent and very much in the moment. You bring full participation in your love interest, and such attention breathes life into any lover. But it's not something that can be sustainable, and it can be shocking for your object of love. Everything may seem anti-climatic after the initial tide of excitement. To avoid burnout in love, and keep it fresh, you want solo adventures. You thrive when you have a life apart, and so does your favorite. This keeps it new as you giddy to share everything you've done and seen with your significant others. Consider the motto of Aries I - knowing yourself through many trials and feats. Venus in Aries is associated with the knowledge of the power of oneself. It is a challenge from time to time for this Venus to be paired. Part of Venus in the Aries will rebel against being us, and demonstrate over and over again, the personality I am. But some understanding here, for the individualistic nature of Aries, helps to smooth out roughness. Celebrating each of them as an amazing special entity, within a couple, makes Venus in Aries happy. Photo by Ronald Martinez/Getty Images Venus and Serena: Their names are as synonymous with their outstanding style as they are with the game that made their name famous. The Williams sisters have changed the way tennis players dress up with their bold colors and loud prints, not to mention their oh-so-mini skirts. But it is the eldest of the two, Venus, who parlayed her on-court flair, and her degree in fashion design, in men's and active wear line is called EleVen. Williams has some ideas about what guys guys don't have to-wash the courts, too. The 33-year-old Olympic champion and 21st Grand Slam winner, who was eliminated in singles but still plays doubles at the U.S. Open, says she can be a little picky when it comes to the guy swag, but she's not the only one. She and her sisters have certain criteria a man must meet if he wants to impress a Williams woman. Men's Health: How do you get the inspiration for your active line of wear, EleVen? Venus Williams: The EleVen model looks good, plays well. We believe that if you look good, you will play well in life, in sports, and in everything you do. Why not wear something that you feel good about? The inspiration for this season was energy. Pattern and print are staples in the EleVen-I love tie dyes and florals. This season I had to challenge myself to imagine new colors. MH: What are you looking for in the style of a man? Williams: How a person carries himself is important. He has to have style, he has to be fit and he has to be funny. All women dream of a guy with broad shoulders, tight waist, cut hands, excellent skin and beautiful teeth. But sometimes you find this guy, and he's not very nice. After all, it's about what's inside. MH: The first thing you notice about the guy is his . . . Williams: Shoes. It may look great, but if the shoe is not, it does not work. Some guys wear tennis shoes with a jacket and it can work. They don't have to be the most expensive shoes either. You just have to be able to put yourself together. MH: Is there a fashion faux pas we should avoid? Williams: My sisters and I joke about square costumes. We say: He was nice, but he had a box. You have to think about things like how a suit fits because women notice. Also, if you wear too much fragrance, it can be overwhelming. The understated, masculine smell is really attractive. But I might be too picky. If you liked this story, you'll love them: This content is created and supported by a third party, and imported to this page to help users provide their email addresses. One eye is green and the other is blue. And one side of her face is covered with black fur and the other is orange. Venus was found on a dairy farm in North Carolina in 2009, and her owner was attracted to her because the cat was similar to a combination of her other two pets, an orange tabby and a black cat. The unusual appearance of Venus brought her the nickname Chimera cat. In mythology chimera is a hybrid of different species of animals, usually a creature with the body of a lion and the head of a goat. But animals are called chimeras when their cells contain two types what happens when two embryos merge together. Leslie Lyons, a professor at the University of California at the School of Veterinary Medicine, who heads 99 Lives Cat Whole Genome Sequencing initiatives, says that while feline chimeras are not as rare, determining whether Venus is indeed a chimera will require DNA testing. Such a test would involve taking samples from both sides of Venus and testing to see if DNA samples differ. But Venus's genetics don't matter to her more than 200,000 Facebook fans. The 5-pound cat keeps her fans up to date with her day-to-day antics playing with her feline siblings and stealing food from a dog bowl. And for those who would like Venus their own, stuffed animal maker Gund sells a chimera cat plush toy. Watch Venus meet the stuffed version of herself in the video below.
